
Applications Engineer

Company Information:

Mayville Products Corporation is a successful manufacturing company located in Mayville, Wisconsin (Dodge County). We are a vertically integrated manufacturer of fabricated sheet-metal and tubular steel products. Working from our OEM customer's designs, we manufacture enclosures, engineered frames, chassis, racks, and components for the telecommunications, computer, and other high-technology markets. We manufacture products for leading global companies and under our own brand names. Visit our website at www.MayvilleProducts.com for more information. We're growing our engineering department, and seeking a post-entry level engineer to join our team.

Job Description:

Applications Engineer. As an Application Engineer, you will serve as the initial point of contact for customers seeking information and quotations for our fabricated sheet metal and tubular steel products. You will work closely with our customers, outside sales force, and inside program managers to receive and respond to inquiries and requests to quote. Working with other team members, you will review drawings and specifications, calculate cost estimates, and suggest design changes to save cost or improve ease of manufacture. After working with the customer to answer questions and help win the order, you will participate in new product introductions to the manufacturing group.

Job Qualifications:

The successful candidate will have a BSME degree with 2 – 5 years work experience with technical or custom-engineered products. Experience with the design and fabrication of metal products and components such as enclosures, frames, chassis, or racks is preferred but not required. The best candidate will have excellent computer skills including experience working with Excel, SolidWorks, and Pro-E.

This is a perfect post entry level job for a smart and energetic mechanical engineer looking to continue developing skills in the design and fabrication of sheet metal and tubular steel products.

Next Steps:

Mayville Products Corporation is growing and successful. We offer a competitive compensation and benefit package for the best candidate.
